“From the Beat to the Beach.”

About the Owner

Coastal Command Bin Cleaning was founded by a retired law-enforcement officer Joe Collins, who spent his career protecting and serving his community. After years on the beat, Joe determined another public-health issue hiding in plain sight — dirty, bacteria-filled trash bins sitting outside homes and businesses.

Now, he's taken that same commitment to public safety and brought it to sanitation. Coastal Command Bin Cleaning delivers high-temperature washing, sanitizing, and deodorizing services that eliminate germs, odors, and biohazards from trash and recycling bins.

From protecting neighborhoods to protecting families from harmful bacteria, our mission is simple: keep your environment clean, safe, and healthy — from the beat to the beach.

Statement of the Problem

In Panama City, Florida, the warm, humid climate combined with continuous residential and commercial waste generation creates conditions that enable trash bins to rapidly accumulate organic residue, bacteria, and odors when not cleaned on a routine basis. Many households and businesses rely solely on weekly waste pickup, which removes trash but leaves behind decomposing liquids and debris inside bins that promote microbial growth, foul smells, and pest attraction. These unsanitary environments drastically increase the risk of disease transmission through direct contact, as well as vectors such as flies, rodents, and insects, which are very common in coastal and subtropical environments like Bay County. Additionally, persistent odors and visible grime negatively impact neighborhood cleanliness, quality of life, and community aesthetics, especially in densely populated or tourist-adjacent areas. Over time, lack of regular cleaning also accelerates the deterioration of trash bins, leading to increased replacement costs for residents and municipalities. The negligence of routine trash bin sanitation therefore represents a prominent public health, environmental, and quality-of-life concern in Panama City, highlighting the need for consistent monthly trash bin cleaning as a preventive and sustainable sanitation practice.
